While skirts are not growing appreciably wider, the tendency is to break up the severity of the figure outline, without adding anything to its size. Plaittings and draperies that give downward—not crosswise—lines are used for this purpose. Plaits are narrow and used in various ways. There is a new side-plaiting, very fine, that has very much the appearance of accordion plaiting. It is being used a great deal in the soft materials—chiffon for evening and fine voiles for afternoon frocks. Some attempt has been made to introduce it into light cloth for street wear, but I very much doubt its becoming very popular; side-plaitings about an inch wide seem much more appropriate. These are introduced into many new skirts in the old familiar way—inset at each of the gore seams, and stitched down tight to flounce depth. Even then they do not flare, but are pressed very, very flat, so that they show very little movement, even in walking, but are there evidently as a concession to the objectors to the narrow skirts. Very diplomatically is the old side-plaited flounce around the bottom of the skirt being suggested, but its day seems scarcely to have arrived. The most attractive way of using the plaits, because the most novel, is in a panel, introduced at only one place on the skirt. It may be at the front or on one side, but it is always a distinct group and not repeated. The plaits are stitched down nearly if not quite all the way, and are pressed flat. They run from the hem to the waist in some cases; in others the panel of plaits is inserted at the hip or at knee depth.—“What the Dressmaker Thinks,” in The Ladies' World for September.

Saline Township Items.

We are having nice weather again after the many good rains we have had. The corn looks fine.

They had another hail storm in the vicinity of Rock Lick school house damaging corn for Bud Crawford, Mrs. Shoemyre, Mr. Luth and Ell Crawford.

Nearly everyone has their threshing done. Good yield of timothy and oats, wheat very short.

A Pretty Girl

may have a fine figure of her own, but it is the figures of her bank account that counts the most nowadays. Girls who are earning will be wise to bank their savings. Remember the old Scotch advice, “Every little makes much.” Let us persuade you to commence banking with us and you will soon be fascinated with the habit of saving. Suppose you start in right now.

DeMoss Chapel Notes.

A fine rain Sunday night.

Quite a lot of oats and timothy to thresh in this neighborhood yet.

The oat yield is good. W. S. Wilson and Hugh Ford's oats made 61 to 75 bu. per acre.

Israel Coe and wife, of Waverly, Ill., visited Mrs. Turnbull a few days. They were on their way from an extended trip to the Pacific coast and the Northwestern States.

Rev. Robert McIlroy, of Lakenan has been helping Rev. Fred Hanes in a meeting at the Chapel for the last two weeks. He has been doing some effective preaching. He is certainly a preacher of unusual power and ability in a revival. The meeting is still in progress. The results to date is, about 30 additions to the church. The Pastor, Bro. Hanes baptized 23 persons Sunday night and received 27 into the church. There are others to be baptized and received into the church.

L. E. Morgan of near Shiel brought a load of 8 cents hogs to town Tuesday. Mr. Morgan has quite a herd and has been fortunate enough to never have the cholera in his herd. He tells us that he has some of the finest corn that he ever saw grow out of the ground. But little threshing has been done in his neighborhood.

Rev. J. W. Smith the pastor of Grace Baptist church has been conducting a series of meetings at Harmony church near Stoutsville. Much interest has been awakened and the church has been greatly revived. Several have been added to the church. Rev. Smith baptized a class Tuesday.

An exchange has discovered that the moon gets full, but goes on shining; the rain drops but gets up again; the stars shoot, but they will not kill; the willows weep, but do not shed tears; night falls but doesn't break, day breaks, but doesn't fall; the fly swallows, and the swallows fly.

Rev. Father F. J. Keonan died Sunday at Chicago. At one time he was in charge of the St. Paul Catholic church but at the time of his death he was pastor of the church at Old Mines. He was much loved by those who knew him.

B. F. Cummins was a business visitor at Hannibal part of the week!

The Jewish Holidays which come in the Fall are earlier than usual this year. They start in next week causing a good demand for poultry and after these holidays are over, poultry, we think, will be a good deal lower. We are buying now for the first holiday and think it better for the seller as well as ourselves to sell as soon as convenient any poultry that you have to sell soon, excepting geese, ducks and turkeys. We think you have something like three weeks or a month to sell before the break. We are judging the future by the past and unless there should be very heavy receipts during these holidays poultry will hold up.—Henderson & Sons Produce Co.
